Information Systems and Data Modelling

Lab Sheet 14 - Revision

YEAR 1, SEMESTER 2

---

1. Write the Relational Schema of the following ER-diagram

2. Write the table definitions (CREATE Table commands with Constraints) for the schema you got and insert some meaningful sample data (using INSERT INTO command) into the created relations.

3. Write the following queries in SQL

Employee (eid, name, salary, dept, address)

Department (deptNo, name, building, managerID)

a. Print all employee names.

b. Print names of employees working for “Administration” (i.e. dname) department.

c. Print names of employees working for ‘Administration’ (i.e. dname) department and getting a salary > Rs. 50,000.

d. Print names of employees who are managers.

e. Print names of employees managing ‘Administration’ or ‘Sales’ department.

f. Print names of employees managing ‘Administration’ and ‘Sales’ department.

g. Print names of employees managing ‘Administration’ but not ‘Sales’ department.

h. Print name of all employees and assigned department’s name.

i. Print department name and number of employees in each department.

j. Print department name and number of employees only if the number of employees is greater than 10.

k. Print employee IDs of employees getting a salary greater than all employees in ‘Sales’ department.

l. Print employee IDs of employees getting a salary greater than any employee in ‘Sales’ department.

m. Print employee IDs of employees getting a salary greater than or equal to the average salary of employees in ‘Sales’ department.